

Stanford University's student members of SEAM (Student for Engagement and Activism in Microfinance) kicked off their elementary school outreach in January implementing a five week program with four local East Palo schools.

The SEAM member's goal is to establish an ongoing One Hen outreach program that members will continue each year. Co-Presidents, Nick Noone and Philippe de Koning, along with core member Marimar Jauregui and Maddie Duhon are actively engaging students on campus around the topic of microfinance. Other campus events include a speaker series, featuring Sam Daley-Harris, Director of Microcredit Summit Campaign.
